

MANDAN Dakota Territory

In 1876, wildfire emotions compel Eileen Callahan to find Donald, her runaway husband, a volunteer in the Seventh Cavalry at Fort Lincoln, Dakota Territory. Why did he marry her if he planned to disappear? While aboard a Missouri steamer, she is befriended by a old bullwhacker, Whiskers, who warns her about flashing those green, innocent eyes upon a sea of ravenous men...and sure enough, Captain Turnbull complicates her life by declaring his devotion. Why could she not have found him before Donald? Crossing the Great American Desert with Whiskers, Eileen finds solace in the sights of Dakota Territory and the tales imparted by the old bullwhacker. Then her hungry heart collides with the handsome rancher, Stuart Tydedale, who initially responds, then spurns her affection. Why tantalize, then treat her like a soiled dove? Upon reaching the Fort, the flags are at half-mast...a massacre! Did Donald die with Custer? Eileen has not planned to be a woman alone on the plains. With the aide of Aunt Fanny, a free, affluent x-slave, Eileen finds the determination to move into tomorrow, as the co-manager of Black Horse Station, a stage stop on the Bismarck to Deadwood Trail...the upcoming sequel.
