

Fact or Fiction

During the troubles in Northern Ireland it was found that the intelligence on the terrorists was very poor. The knowledge of who the terrorists were, who were sympathisers, where their weapons were being stored and any safe houses they might be using as well as any attacks that were likely to be taking place on the security forces was minimal. After a meeting of senior intelligence staff it was decided to put in place a covert intelligence operative to gather such desperately needed information. It is left to the reader to discern as to whether this book is Fact or Fiction.
