

Forward Zouaves!

FORWARD ZOUAVES! A historical novel about a soldier, by a soldier. In 1897 Patrick Manny, a Civil War veteran, is visited by 2nd Lieutenant Hock who is sent by the U.S Army to assist the elderly man file his pension claim as a Civil War veteran. A brief visit becomes an all day affair when Patrick captivates the Lieutenant his tale of the first year of his enlistment in the 165th New York Infantry Regiment. Starting with the training of New Yorkers in to a Zouave Regiment, Patrick tells of their journey to New Orleans, the days in camp and their first fight with the Rebels. A somber Patrick then continues the story, relating the events leading to the bloody assault on Port Hudson. Patrick tells of excitement of the day of the fateful charge into the Rebel guns, and the details of the following siege of the Rebel fort at Port Hudson that lasted for over 40 days in the summer of 1863. What started as a scrapbook of Patrick Meanys enlistment during the Civil War became a story, as Greg Kniesler found odd bits of information that needed further explanation. He also realized this book would be a way to pass on new Lieutenants, like his son, a bit of insight from his 28 years of Army service. Greg uses the words of those that were there to describe the action and then uses his experience as a solder to tell the whole story. Orders, articles and letters provide the setting for this story, allowing the reader to experience the Civil War through the words of those that were there. Greg then completes the picture by telling Patricks story as one soldier would to another. There is one document that illustrates how this story came about. Greg Kniesler was able to review Patricks official Army records from the 165th New York Volunteer Infantry Regiment federalized time in service. There in the file were cards, filled out decades earlier from the Regimental morning reports, validating Patrick's service month by month. In the file was an envelope. A white envelope that was pre-printed with check boxes and a list of various citations and awards that may have been earned. None of the boxes were checked. Well, Greg thought, probably typical government work, someone did not take the time to check the proper box. He opened the envelope and removed the single sheet of plain lined paper. Carefully he unfolded the paper, and revealed the hand written document. Greg read the first line of the neatly written manuscript and knew exactly what it was, and when finished reading it and had to chuckle to himself. For when he read On or about the forth of February 1863, absence himself he knew it was a court martial for Patrick Manny going AWOL, absent without leave, from his Regiment. Having been a company commander he had read many article 15s to his soldiers infractions and knew the phrase on or about very well. And having been stationed in Louisiana, he knew full well what grand event was celebrated in New Orleans in early February. Greg was able to imagine what had transpired and knew there was a story that had to be told.
